Short description

Intangia is a non-profit association created in 2009 with registered offices in the Autonomous Community of Navarre and with nationwide scope throughout Spain. The association currently has more than 180 associates from the culture and creativity industries, from different artistic disciplines: music, audiovisual media, publishing, plastic arts, computing, websites and multimedia, dance, graphic and industrial design, fashion, urban art, scientific research, education and crafts. The Intangia Association provides the necessary tools for all these creative sectors to be able to directly or individually manage their copyrights, the said tools being of 3 types:

- Training and learning instruments on the ways to manage and use their copyrights (via seminars, conferences, courses, written guides, magazines and specialised publications);
- Legal instruments for the direct management of their copyright exploitation rights (providing a legal database and free specialised intellectual property advisory service, as well as a department to deal with the procedures for intellectual and industrial property registrations);
- Technical instruments to ensure that their works are suitably protected, particularly in the digital sphere, (study and research into tools for the technical protection and management of Internet rights, anti-copy systems, watermarks, conditions of use, licences and contracts for the use of creative works in the digital sphere).

Description	1) The aim is to pass on the benefits of individual and direct management of copyrights to other European associations, exchanging experiences with them and informing other cultural and creative associations about these new copyright management models, and about the tools provided by the Intangia Association, applying self-management tools for their copyrights.
